

STYLE SHOW BEST
EVER GIVEN HERE
CRITICS DECLARE

Will be Repeated This Evening at Dixon Theater

The style show held last night at the Dixon Theater was the best show that has been produced under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce and again this evening the people of Dixon and vicinity will have the opportunity to view this spectacular display.

The house was filled to capacity at 7 o'clock last evening and tonight's patrons should go early and get a seat. The following appeared as models, representing the various stores in Dixon:

Kathryn Beard; Mrs. Marguerite Tyne, Miss Julia Ford and Helen Mitchell; shoes, McCoy Bootery; Millinery, Eaton & Kaesser.
Edson-Howell Co.; Mrs. Clark Hess, Florabelle Chenny, Doris Miller and Helen Taylor; shoes, McCoy Bootery; millinery, Edson-Howell Co.
Valle & O'Malley; Demming Hintz, Mitchell Dollmeyer, Jean McChrystal, Jackie McCoy and John Hagerman.
Eichler Bros. Bee Hive; Miss Rae West, Lois Breimer, Mrs. Gladys Hess and Jarleth Jones; shoes, Eichler Bros. Annex; millinery, Eaton & Kaesser.
Boynton-Richards; Ray Joyce, Joe Miller, Earl Larkin and J. B. Wood-Ille.

O. H. Martin Co.; Valetta McFadden, Emma McCoy, Lillian Covert and Eleanor Henney; shoes, McCoy Bootery; millinery, Eaton & Kaesser.
A. L. Seisenheimer; Polly Woodruff, Ruth Lambert, Ruth Cleary, Louise Nixon; shoes, Eichler Bros. Annex; millinery, Eaton & Kaesser.

A very fine overture by the Dixon Theater orchestra was rendered, followed by the feature picture "If Marriage Falls" secured by L. G. Rorer, manager of the Dixon Theater, which was an exceptional picture and well in keeping with the rest of the production. Then followed the first scene of the style show, which represented the interior of a very up-to-date and modish store, where the models in a very snappy way, promanaged before large mirrors and displayed gorgeous costumes to the very best advantage. The color scheme throughout, in scenery, wearing apparel, millinery and furniture was carried out in an artistic manner and just credit should be given to both the merchants and models for the success of this scene.

Boys and Girls Help
Special credit should be given to the little boy and girl models who helped make the style show a decided success and showed their wearing apparel in just as clever a manner as the big folks.

While the models were all assembled, Miss Frances Campbell and Miss Lucille Kelley in their very capable manner each gave solo dances, which were very gracefully and beautifully given, and Mrs. Flora Horner, pianist for the Dixon Theater orchestra, rendered a piano solo, "Musical Musings" at the close of this scene which was much appreciated by the audience.

Furniture of this scene was displayed by Keyes-Ahrens Furniture Co. and Frank H. Kreim. The furniture on the left of the stage was a beautiful two piece living room group of Karpen construction and displayed by Keyes-Ahrens. This is one of the latest designs and carries the newest scheme of decoration, silk threads, American tapestry on seats and backs and lacquered velour on the arms and back. The furniture on the right was another late design upholstered in finest silk mohair and the tables finished with Duco, the new long wearing and beautiful finish, and was displayed by Frank H. Kreim.

Automobiles Displayed
In scene 2, a new feature was introduced in that two beautiful models of automobiles were displayed. A Special Six Studebaker coach by B. P. Downing and a Model Six Tourer Buick Sedan by Floyd G. Eno, filled with beautifully dressed girls and classy attired young men, which made a perfect background for the rest of the splendidly attired models, who displayed their costumes, gay in color and good in line, in a very pleasing manner. The whole effect was deserving of the highest praise.

In every way the apparel shown and the manner in which the models displayed it was a credit to the business men and women and the young people who wore them so becomingly. At the end of this scene Miss Frances Campbell and Lucille Kelly gave a very artistic dance called the "Dance of the Nymphs" and received a hearty applause.

Again tonight the show will be repeated, the program and models to be the same, and no doubt the theater will again be filled to capacity to greet the performers.

Fire, After Robbery,
Destroys Packing House

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 6.—(AP)—Fire following a robbery destroyed the McElwee packing house with a loss estimated at $50,000. The fire broke out shortly after 6 o'clock and in less than ten minutes a general alarm drew every fire fighting apparatus to the scene.

Edward Wallace, the night watchman, accompanied by a German police dog, was patrolling the outside of the plant when two masked men halted him. One blinded him with a flashlight, bound him and took his keys with which they gained admittance to the plant.

Cleveland airmail pilot, who is believed to have crashed in the rugged mountain country east of Bellefonte, Pa. His plane was last seen over Harleton, Pa., last Thursday night, but it failed to reach Bellefonte. Today Pennsylvania militiamen joined their efforts with airplanes and search parties in seeking the missing flyer.

SOLE SURVIVOR
POST GIVES UP
G. A. R. CHARTERForreston Post is No
More; But One Veteran Remains

Henry Hillier Post, G. A. R. Forreston, surrendered its charter today. A few years ago the post was one of the largest in Ogle county. Famed for the enthusiasms of its members, the welfare work conducted among Civil war veterans, it was recognized as one of the most active in this part of the state.

The membership dwindled to one. It became the duty of Capt. Joseph M. Myers to remove the yellowed parchment from its frame and mail it to the state adjutant.

Capt. Myers has affiliated with the post at Freeport.

He has lost none of his interest or enthusiasm in G. A. R. activities. He will "carry on."

Mrs. George Page is Dead in Switzerland

Charles Lawton of Palmyra has received a letter from Cham, Switzerland, telling of the death of Mrs. Geo. Page, which occurred on September 15th. The telegram was sent from Fred Page, Mrs. Page was buried at Lucerne, Switzerland.

Some fifteen years ago George Page passed away April 20, 1899 at the age of 63, and was buried in the cemetery at Palmyra. He was a citizen who did much for Dixon and was very public spirited and a delightful gentleman of the old school. He built the Borden factory in Dixon. "Adelheid" was the name of Mrs. Page and it was thus that the beautiful park lying on the north side of the Rock River west of the city, was named "Adelheid Park."

PLEA FOR HABEAS
CORPUS WRIT WILL BE DECIDED TODAYRelease of a Sterling Girl
From Hospital is Sought

A hearing on the habeas corpus proceeding started in the circuit court last week to secure the release from the Dixon state hospital of Miss Mable Frasier, fifteen-year-old adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Frasier of Sterling, was held before Judge Harry L. Heer yesterday afternoon. Attorney H. A. Brooks appeared for the Frasers and State's Attorney Mark C. Keller represented Dr. Warren G. Murray, supervising officer of the institution.

At the conclusion of the taking of testimony, Judge Heer reserved his final opinion until late today. He stated, however, that it was his opinion that an application for a rehearing should have been brought in the county court of Whiteside county, from which court the girl was committed.

Pronounced Sub-Normal.
Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Frasier of Sterling testified in the girl's behalf. The foster father stated that they had no children and adopted Mable December 15, 1914. He gave his property holding as two residences in Sterling and a farm in Hume township in Whiteside county to show his ability to properly care for the girl. On July 14 a commission of physicians at Sterling after an examination, pronounced the girl sub-normal, the witness stated, the investigation having been the outgrowth of complaints from neighbors. He testified that from the time the girl was adopted at the age of seven years, she had been sent to school and given every attention.

Following an observation conducted by Miss Mildred Bishop, psychologist at the Dixon state hospital, Mr. Frasier stated that the child was classed as feeble minded and produced the report of the psychologist.

Mrs. Frasier in her testimony stated that the mother and a sister of the adopted girl, had visited her and gave it as her opinion that Mable was as bright as the average child.

Life in Institution.
Dr. Louise Keator of the Dixon state hospital staff testified relative to the history of the child in the institution. She said that Mabel was admitted July 20, 1925, and had been engaged in dining room work, in which she had been found to be an obedient patient. In this time the doctor stated that the girl had improved in health and had taken on about ten pounds in weight. In defining her classification at the institution, Dr. Keator said that while the girl was in past 15 years of age, her mental rating was about seven years, classifying her as a high-grade imbecile. The girl is not responsible for her acts and girls of her mentality are deserving of close supervision and are not fit subjects to be paroled, the doctor stated.

State's Attorney Keller offered a motion to dismiss the habeas corpus writ on the grounds that no showing had been made by the applicant to show that Mabel Frasier was illegally or unlawfully being held or detained by Dr. Warren G. Murray of the Dixon state hospital or any other persons connected with the institution.

Judge Heer ordered that the girl be returned to the hospital until the court finally passes on the case.

Thought Lost in Fog
It is in the vicinity of Clarion that Ames is believed to have been forced to earth after becoming lost in the fog and exhausting his supply of gasoline. This theory is strengthened by reports from H. B. Shaver, assistant division superintendent of the air mail service, that five persons had seen an airplane circling about west of that place early Friday morning, apparently seeking a safe landing place. Pointing out that Ames had not stopped at Bellefonte, his regular place for refueling, Shaver said that his supply of gas probably had become exhausted and that he had crashed to earth before able to find an open space in the rugged mountainous country.

The squadron of airplanes which yesterday flew a total of 6,000 miles back and forth over a section west of Clarion, continued their scouting today as did many volunteers who have offered their services here.

Hope was all but gone today that Ames would be found alive. One theory for the failure to find him is that the wrecked plane caught fire and that nothing was left of it, except the engine. This, it was pointed out would make it extremely hard to locate in the dense woods.

MacMillan's Flagship
Arrives at No. Sydney
Sydney, N. S., Oct. 6.—(AP)—The auxiliary schooner Bowdoin, flag ship of the MacMillan Arctic expedition docked here today. The schooner will take on oil and leave a few hours later for the Maine coast. It is understood that the other vessel of the expedition, the Peary, is waiting at Liscomb, N. S., and will go out from that port to join the Bowdoin when the passes. Commander MacMillan is eager to reach Wiscasset, Maine, by Oct. 10.

The conviction that airplanes are not practicable for use in the far north, was expressed by Commander MacMillan after the arrival of his schooner.

Autoists Had Narrow Escape on Crossing
About 10:30 Sunday evening, an automobile being driven west on seventh street at the Illinois Central crossing narrowly escaped being wrecked and the occupants killed, when the car was driven in front of the third section of train No. 175 northbound in charge of Engineer Charles Foessler and Conductor Niman of Freeport. The train was leaving Dixon and when the engine was within 50 feet of the crossing north of the depot, the automobile was driven directly in the path of a big locomotive.

The driver stalled the engine and the train was brought to a stop three feet from the machine. Engineer Foessler applying the emergency brakes, causing a flat car at the rear of the train, which was loaded with road material to buckle, necessitating a delay of about two hours before the freight train could proceed.

Three Paid Fines in

Grant Shanks was fined $100 and costs on a charge of possessing and transporting intoxicating liquor when arraigned before Justice M. J. Gannon in police court yesterday. Charles Sworn, Jr., paid a fine of $10 and costs for being intoxicated and A. Farber was fined $3 and costs for failing to observe traffic regulations.

GREDINAR IS PUT ON TRIAL TODAY
IN CIRCUIT COURTMotion to Quash Indictment in Liquor
Case is Overruled

A motion to quash the indictment returned by the September grand jury against Constantin Gredinar, charging violation of the prohibition law, was overruled by Judge Harry L. Heer in the circuit court this morning. Attorneys Erwin and Brooks, representing Gredinar, sought to have the indictment quashed on the grounds that it was improperly drawn. Arguments were heard late yesterday afternoon and Judge Heer handed down his decision this morning.

Following the denial of the motion, Gredinar was arraigned and entered a motion of not guilty through his attorneys. The task of selecting a jury for the immediate hearing of the case was begun.

Gredinar is facing a second offense in the circuit court today for the violation of the prohibition law and is one of the two defendants, to be tried at this term, against whom deportation proceedings will doubtless be started, provided he is found guilty of the charge, which will constitute a felony.

Attorney John E. Erwin in arguing the motion to quash the indictment yesterday afternoon stated that in his opinion, no less than one-half of the people were being wrongfully punished in Lee county.

"This is no fault of the court and does not apply to this court but the one down stairs," the attorney charged, referring to the county court. "Attorneys are anxious to dispose of cases and enter pleas of guilty to informations which in reality charge nothing."

for Man Lost Since
Thursday

Bellefonte, Pa., Oct. 6.—(AP)—State troops were expected to receive orders today to join the hunt for Charles H. Ames, air mail pilot who disappeared last Thursday night while on his regular flight from New York to Chicago.

After four days of fruitless search by a squadron of airplanes and hundreds of volunteers on foot and in motor cars. Superintendent Egge of the air mail service, who is in charge of the work, last night appealed to Governor Pinchot for aid. The governor at once wired Adjutant General Leary in Harrisburg to communicate with Mr. Egge and to offer any possible assistance from the National Guard.

The telegram had not reached the adjutant general early today, but officials at his office said it would receive prompt attention.

LEGION TO HAVE CHARGE FUNERAL
OF JAMES SCHROCKServices at the Lutheran Church Tomorrow
Afternoon, 2:30

The funeral of James G. Schrock, who passed away suddenly at Rockford Sunday, will be held Wednesday afternoon, 2 o'clock at the home and 2:30 at the Lutheran church, Rev. Walter officiating. The American Legion will have charge of the services at the grave.

The members of the American Legion Auxiliary are requested to meet at G. A. R. hall at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon to attend the funeral.

Obituary.
James Glenmore Schrock, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Schrock, was born at Cameron, Mo., March 25, 1895, and died Oct. 4, 1925, aged thirty years, six months and nine days.

He leaves to mourn his passing his parents, seven sisters and seven brothers, one brother having preceded him in death.

In early life he affiliated with the St. Paul's Lutheran church in Dixon, remaining faithful to the church of his choice until death. He was a member of the choir of that church.

He was a member of Dixon Lodge No. 779, B. P. O. E., also of the Dixon Post of the American Legion. He served in the Ordnance Department of the American Expeditionary Forces—remaining in France several months after the armistice in post war work. At the time of his passing, he was an efficient employee of the Dixon post office.

Because of his congenial disposition, his loyalty to his home and country, and his upright living, he has amassed a host of friends who mourn his passing.

Sterling is Seeking Lower Insurance Rate

Sterling—Mayor Fred W. Honens and the city commissioners are hopeful that the inspection to be made this week of conditions in Sterling by the representative of the insurance company will result in the lowering of the fire insurance rates in the city.

Charles W. Parsons of the Illinois Inspection Bureau arrived here Monday morning and after a conference with Mayor Honens, started an investigation of the local facilities to fight conflagrations and of the general conditions. He will note the equipment at the fire station, the number of men employed, their record for efficiency, will inspect the water works and will take in every detail that contributes towards lessening the fire hazards here.

Mayor Honens called the special attention of Inspector Parsons to the large amount of additional pavement in the city, which served to permit the fire department to reach the scene of fires in all sections of the city much easier and quicker. The easier access to the factories and other properties on the south side of the Northwest-railroad tracks as the result of the building of the subway was also pointed out to the inspector by Mayor Honens.

The result of the inspection as to whether the insurance companies consider the improved conditions sufficient to warrant a lowering of the rates will be awaited with considerable interest.

Epilepsy Cause of
L. E. Donoho's Death

Coroner F. M. Banker of Franklin Grove conducted an inquest yesterday afternoon over the body of Louis Elvira Donoho at the home at 1825 West Third street and the jury found that his death was due to epilepsy, from which he had been a sufferer for many years. Members of the family testified that he had been subject to attacks of epilepsy from the time he was a baby until he was seven years, and that the attacks had occurred when he was about 27 and had continued until his death, every few months. He suffered a slight attack Sunday morning, but arose on Monday morning and ate his breakfast and appeared to be in normal health. After breakfast he went to an outside toilet and was found there shortly afterward, dead. Dr. Powell was summoned but life was extinct when he arrived.

Big Shipment of Gold
Due in N. Y. Tomorrow
New York, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The first shipment of gold from England to the United States since the lifting of the export gold controls last spring is scheduled to arrive tomorrow on the Homeric for the Seaboard National Bank of New York. The consignment amounts to $215,660.

Officials of the Seaboard Bank announced that the gold was being shipped by a London correspondent of the institution in connection with a foreign exchange transaction. The shipment is in the form of gold bars. Additional consignments are expected by the bank if sterling exchange holds around present levels.

Accused of Killing Her Husband Following a Quarrel

Quincy, Ill., Oct. 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Edna Platt Brown, the first woman in ten years to be indicted in Adams county on a charge of murdering her husband, went on trial in circuit court here today.

If she is convicted it will be the first time in the history of the present generation that a woman has been found guilty of murder in this county.

Mrs. Brown was indicted immediately after the shooting occurred on May 27. Since then she has been confined in the Adams county jail.

Matthew Brown, the man she shot and killed in a little grocery store and soft drink parlor adjacent to their home, was her third husband. The tragedy ended a quarrel that had its beginning in mutual jealousy.

"I'll never beat me again," Mrs. Brown is reported to have said just before she shot her husband. It is expected that the state will use this piece of evidence, corroborated by witnesses, in prosecuting the case. Self defense will probably be the defendant's plea.

Mrs. Brown is 31 years old and her husband was 32. They had been married only eight months.

In January 1923, Mrs. Brown was convicted of violating the prohibition act, for which she received a jail sentence and a fine.

PRESIDENT GIVEN
OVATION BY CROWD
IN OMAHA TODAYThrongs Stand in Rain to Cheer Chief Executive
There

(Editor's Note.—President Coolidge's address to American Legion will be found on page 5.)

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 6.—(AP)—President Coolidge, coming into world war atmosphere, was in Omaha today to address the American Legion convention and review the annual parade of Legionnaires.

Arriving here at 8:30 a. m., after a 1,300 mile journey from Washington, the President found the city swarming with former service men and the weather as disagreeable as it frequently was in France.

A cold driving rain reckoned to put a damper on the day's activities, as the sky was so overcast that there was slight prospect of a letup in the downpour.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge were greeted at Union Station by James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, whose wife had come from Washington on the presidential train, Gov. McFul-len of Nebraska, Mayor Dahlman of Omaha and a score of prominent citizens and Legion officials. Hundreds of former service men jammed the train shed and as the President passed they broke into cheers.

Rest at Banker's Home.
From the station, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were taken to the home of Walter Head, Omaha banker, who at one time was president of the American Bankers' Association, for a rest before going to the convention auditorium.

Although they had been aboard train nearly 40 hours neither appeared fatigued.

In coming to Omaha to address the Legion, Mr. Coolidge traveled farther from Washington than at any time since entering the White House and through sections of the country he had not visited as chief executive. He is the first president to honor the American Legion with his presence at its annual convention, although at its vice president he attended the Kansas City gathering several years ago.

Luncheon at Club.
In addition to delivering a speech before the convention, the President, before leaving late today for Washington, planned to attend a luncheon at the Omaha Club, given him by prominent citizens and Legion officials and to review the afternoon parade of American Legion members. Arrangements had been made for him to ride at the head of the procession as far as the reviewing stand.

Five thousand persons packed the Omaha Auditorium listening to speeches by Commissioner of Education Tiger, and George L. Berry, representing the American Federation of Labor, as they awaited President Coolidge's arrival.

A detachment from the 17th infantry at Fort Crook formed an avenue into the hall for the President and Mrs. Coolidge, who were given an ovation by the crowd standing outside in the rain, as their automobile, with top down, despite the weather, approached the entrance.

Given an Ovation.
The President entered the hall ten minutes before he was scheduled to speak. With the band playing "Hail to the Chief," he was greeted with rounds of cheers. Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge posed for pictures, then Commander Drain began a speech of introduction.

There was another outburst of cheering as the President began to speak.

Photographers begged Mrs. Coolidge to come to the front of the platform and when she did, she too was given an ovation equal to that accorded the President.

Without any preliminary remarks, the President began reading his prepared address.

Mendota-Princeton Bus Line is Assured

The Rock River Bus Company of Sterling has been granted a permit to operate passenger motor buses and freight trucks between Mendota and Princeton by the Illinois Commerce Commission. Service between these two cities likely will be commenced in a few days.

The Rock River Bus Company, which lost out on its application for a permit to operate between Sterling and Dixon, has the right to make an appeal on the decision of the Illinois Commerce Commission, but the owners had not definitely decided Monday morning what they would do.

Funeral of Miss Tofte
Held Sunday Afternoon

Funeral services for Miss Esther Tofte were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Rock Falls Congregational church. The church was filled with relatives and friends of the young girl who paid their last respects to her. Rev. F. F. Fitch conducted the funeral service and the members of the Eastern Star turned the reception for the casket and also had charge of the services at the grave. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Calls U. S. Big Example of Good Roads Building

Buenos Aires, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The Pan-American roads congress has been officially inaugurated in the presence of delegates from virtually all the states represented in the Pan-American union and high officials of the Argentine government.

Enor Ortiz, minister of public works, said there was no more instructive lesson in road development than that given in the United States where more than a billion dollars was spent in a single year in the construction and maintenance of roads.

"Aviators desire," Lieut. Carpenter said, "to impress the layman with their unusual skill."

Lieut. Carpenter declared that unrest of air personnel also was apparent in the navy as a whole, and he blamed legislation which he said calls for forced retirement of many officers to enable promotion of others.

A separate air corps would only add to present dissatisfaction, he continued, as it would create "special privileged class officers." Agitation, he added, was too important to be confined to a separate corps and he believed an aviator should be first a naval officer and then a flier.

The present status of aviation work was described by the witness as analogous to that caused by the advent of steam power and the conflict between the air service and the navy was pictured as a battle of "the 'show me' spirit of old age" against "youthful enthusiasm."

New Postal Card for Use to Foreign Lands

Washington, Oct. 6.—(AP)—A new three-cent postcard, bearing in red the portrait of President McKinley, is being prepared by the postoffice department for use under a new postal card rate adopted by the universal postal congress at Stockholm.

The new rate does not apply to postal cards addressed to Canada, Spain and its colonies, or the Pan-American countries, for which the present two-cent foreign postal card will continue to be used.

LICENSED TO WED.

A marriage license has been issued to George W. Smith of Franklin Grove and Miss Lena L. Crouse of Eldena.

PREACHERS HEAR STORY OF BATTLE AGAINST DISEASE

Dr. A. H. Burr Delivered Address to Ministers

Dr. A. H. Burr gave the preachers a different message Monday forenoon at the Y. M. C. A. than they usually receive, but one highly appreciated. His lecture on "The Warfare Against Disease" was a historical sketch of the marvelous advances of medical science, especially within the period of his own practice, the last forty-five years. The old proverb, "The good die young," he said, if true, is a bit embarrassing to preachers, for they hold the record, as a profession, for longevity.

Victims were justified, and wonder expressed over the frantic horror of supposedly good and sensible people, who would prohibit the doctors whose purpose is humanitarian, but who aren't worried in the least over the thousand-fold more mutilation of domestic animals for purely commercial reasons. They relish very highly their caponized chick, the delectable steak of the steer and the tender chop of the porker; and the suggestion of anesthesia in connection with these later would waken a storm of mirth at most.

Inspiring victories over typhoid, smallpox, malaria, etc., and in the great field of surgery were recounted and described. Compulsory vaccination was recommended; "and blunt warning given against the religious, medical, or medico-religious fakes, as a relic of the days of superstition and bigotry, which prevented for centuries humble and sincere seekers after wisdom from even the dissection of a corpse that it might be known how our bodies are made."

As one of the divines said, "It was some lecture, and did us all good."

Mitchell Court Martial to Await Davis' Return

Washington, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Convention of a court martial to try Col. William Mitchell, whose criticism of the army and navy in connection with the air service has caused widespread attention, probably will not be called before next week. Action will await the return of Acting Secretary Davis.

Colonel Mitchell has stated that if court martial proceedings were begun Representative Reid of Illinois would head his civilian defense committee. The congressman was a member of the house aircraft committee of the last congress.

Librarian of Canadian Parliament Died Monday

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 6.—(AP)—Alfred Duclos DeCelles, 82, member of the Royal Society of Canada, and a chevalier of the Legion of Honor, died here last night.

He was general librarian of the Canadian parliament and well known as a newspaper man and had written extensively on political subjects.

Martial Law in Greece to Establish Censorship

London, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Special dispatches from Athens say that the Greek government has proclaimed martial law.

A dispatch to the Telegraph quotes Premier Pangalos as saying that the purpose is to establish a censorship so as to prevent political leaders from using the newspapers to disturb public opinion.

DUCHESS DE ROHAN'S FETE DE NUIT

The fete de nuit given in the illuminated garden at the Duchesse de Rohan's this week was like a scene in fairyland. "Tout Paris" assembled to see the dancing of Jenny Golden, the Argentina and Cossack dancers. The use of plain kid shoes for evening wear was a prominent feature of the gathering.

Baronne Mayronnet Saint Marc wore very decollete jade green kid footwear with crystal buttons.

Comtesse Astolfi wore crossed strapped shoes in two shades of red kid and with heels adorned with strass.

Beam-Lathomus Wedding Celebrated

The following is an account of the wedding of Miss Gladys Beam of Chicago and Francis Arthur Lathomus, the article being clipped from a Chicago paper:

The wedding of Miss Gladys Emily Beam and Francis Arthur Lathomus took place at Grace English Lutheran church at 8 p. m. Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th. The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Virginia Beam. The bridesmaids were Miss Viola Beam and Miss Evelyn Beam. The best man to the groom was Fred Warnecke.

The ushers were Mr. Gray and Mr. Nelson. After the ceremony the reception was held at the home of the bride. The flower girl was little Miss Madeline Stiff, niece of Mrs. C. J. Larson of 4508 N. Lawndale avenue. After spending their honeymoon in New York Mr. and Mrs. Lathomus will be at home at 1944 Wilson avenue after Oct. 12th.

The bride is a niece of Mrs. N. M. Stiff of this city. Mrs. Stiff and daughter, Madeline, have returned from Chicago where Madeline was flower girl at the wedding. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Beam, of 5907 Winthrop avenue, Chicago.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin and wore a lace veil and her bouquet was of bridal roses.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids were all gowned in dresses in the different tones of orchid.

The flower girl was adorable in her frock of delicate pink crepe over satin, wearing white kid slippers, and having an ornamental band in her hair. She carried a basket of pink roses.

The young couple are motoring through the east and after Oct. 22nd, will be at home to friends at 1944 Wilson avenue, Chicago.

The church in which this wedding was solemnized was the one in which Dr. Dornblaser, formerly of Dixon, preached for a number of years.

All the lady attendants at the wedding were in Dixon to attend the wedding of the former Misses Knapp.

Dixon friends will extend best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Lathomus at this time.

Pretty Autumn Wedding Saturday

Morrison, Ill., Oct. 5.—The home of Mrs. Anna Hayden of East Main street was the scene of a simple but beautiful wedding at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, which united the lives of Miss Rosalie M. Bedell of this city and Ira Hotchkiss of Franklin Grove. The rooms were lovely for the occasion with a profusion of garden flowers against a background of ferns and vines forming an effective setting for the impressive single ring service which was solemnized by Rev. Oscar Neher, former pastor of the Church of the Brethren at Franklin Grove, and a personal friend of the groom. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Guy Bedell of Ellisworth, Ill., was charming in a gown of sand crepe with garnitures of pouf de blue, carrying a cluster of bridal roses.

Following the ceremony, which was witnessed by a few intimate friends, a dainty two course luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss left later in the afternoon on a short motor journey and on their return will reside at Franklin Grove, where a cozy bungalow has been furnished.

The bride, whose life until recent months has been spent in Morrison, is a young woman of rare personal charm and fine character. Subsequent to her graduation from the city schools she took special normal training for the profession of teaching in which she was successfully engaged for a number of years, being for seven of these connected with the schools of this city. She later took a business course in Dixon and for several months has held a responsible position with the Banker's Life Insurance Company in Dixon.

The bridegroom, who is engaged in the garage business at Franklin Grove received his education in the vicinity of Dixon, and is spoken of in the highest terms by those who know him. The many friends of both extend the best of wishes for happiness and good fortune.

BARBARA LA MARR SUFFERS NERVOUS BREAKDOWN—

Los Angeles, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The Examiner says Barbara La Marr has suffered a breakdown in health that will compel her temporary retirement from the screen.

The actress collapsed during the filming of a scene here Saturday and physicians advised her to give up her work until she regains her health.

Barnhizer-Gillot Wedding Saturday

(Special to the Telegraph.)

Polo, Ill., Oct. 5.—On Saturday, Oct. 3, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Barnhizer was the scene of a very pretty wedding when their daughter, Nina Barnhizer became the bride of Harold Gillot, son of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Gillot of Chicago. At 11 o'clock the bridal couple took their places before a bower of ferns and roses. Rev. Cook of Rockford, a former Polo minister, read the ceremony. The couple were attended by Miss Vera Cheesman of Rockford, a close friend of the bride and Henry Thomas of Chicago. The Barnhizer home was beautifully decorated in orchid and gold.

The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of orchid georgette and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of gold color georgette.

After the ceremony a three-course wedding breakfast was served to twenty guests, only the immediate families and a few friends being present. Mrs. Ruth Stifer acting as caterer, and Mrs. Florence Wesner and Mary Wisner, cousins of the bride served.

Mrs. Gillot is a graduate of the Polo high school in class of 1919, and has been a successful teacher in the grade school in Oregon for the past three years. She is an attractive and charming young woman with a host of Polo friends. Mr. Gillot is in a lumber company in Chicago and has many friends in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillot left in the afternoon for a short honeymoon in Wisconsin after which they will be at home to their many friends in Chicago.

Stegmeier-Cobb Wedding Thursday

Rockelle—John Stegmeier has issued announcements for the marriage of his daughter, Miss Edris Ladd Stegmeier, to Homer Brush Cobb, which occurred at the Stegmeier home at 4:00 o'clock, Thursday afternoon, October 1st. Rev. F. W. Nazarene read the beautiful ring service of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. S. W. Hoon, sister of the groom, rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bridal party took their places at the wedding altar.

The bride was attended by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Richard Holland, as matron of honor, and her sister, Miss Eric Stegmeier as maid of honor, and Richard Holland, of Geneva, served Mr. Cobb as his best man.

The bride, one of Rockelle's most attractive and talented young ladies was graduated from Rockelle High school with the Class of 1923, and has since been employed in a stenographic capacity for several local attorneys. She is a member of the Methodist choir.

Mr. Cobb, a graduate of the local high school with the Class of 1923, is the junior member of the clothing firm of Cobb & Stevens.

Mr. and Mrs. Cobb left for Chicago after the wedding and motored to Champaign, Saturday, to attend the Illinois-Nebraska football game.

They will reside in apartments in the Venetian Building.

REAL SPORTS FOR THE GIRLS THIS YEAR—

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Sports are to replace dumbbells and kindred gymnastics for girls at Drake University this year, Miss Ruby Holton, head of the physical education program said today.

"Formal gymnastics, including marching, dumbbell exercise, Indian clubs and bar work will be substituted by athletic games and dancing classes," she said, adding that the girls "are bored with floor work in a gym."

SEWING CIRCLE TO MEET THURSDAY—

The Sewing Circle of the Church of God will hold an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Miller, 314 Chamberlain street Thursday. ## GOOD-BYE STREET CARS.

We can say good-bye to the street cars in Dixon without any feelings of regret. It is true that they have been a convenience to some people who lived along the lines in the outlying parts of town, but not enough patronized them to make it pay, so the street car company cannot be blamed for abandoning the lines.

When the street cars came to Dixon they were hailed as a great step in advance, but now the tearing up of the rails can not be regarded as retrogression, because changing times have rendered the street cars obsolete. A system of bus lines will fill their places better than the street cars ever did it, and our streets will be freer and safer for the always increasing automobile traffic.

And while we are tearing up the rails let us repave the downtown streets in Dixon and make them wider. Here is an opportunity to make a big improvement in Dixon.

ROOM FOR VISITORS.

If those of us who bring cars downtown in Dixon every day would be a little more thoughtful about where we park them we could make things pleasanter for out-of-town visitors. A great deal of the parking space in the downtown section is occupied the whole day through by cars belonging to local businessmen. In most instances these cars could be parked a block or two away from the main corners with very little inconvenience. It would be a nice show of hospitality if we could thus clear the business streets of local cars and make room for our neighbors who come in to shop and transact business with us.

NOT FAIR WEATHER BIRD.

The motor bus is not to be permitted to exist only as a fair weather bird. It can not logically be permitted to operate when going is good, taking the cream of the business from the more reliable transportation companies, only to stay in the garage when the going is bad.

General regulations of buses are forecast in action of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission. Operators who suspend service more than five days forfeit their licenses, under the rule now effective in Minnesota.

That rule allows for mishaps and for such conditions as would compel any competing companies to suspend operations. It places the bus on a basis with the train. Swollen streams, broken bridges, blizzard blockades all retard the most reliable transportation known to the world. Fair allowance is made by the commission for such natural handicaps. Bad roads and bad weather are not to be considered good reasons for suspending traffic.

The rule also goes to the point that licenses can not be held unless the highways over which the buses operate are of such character than transportation facilities are practically assured in accordance with the schedule approved by the commission.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE.

Florida is jammed not only with realtors, visitors and investors, but with freight. So great has become the pressure of building materials and machinery, resulting from the state's great building boom, that it has been necessary to declare a temporary embargo on non-perishable freight in southern Florida.

The embargo will be lifted, of course, as the situation straightens out. While it lasts, it serves to call emphatic attention to the vast construction program going forward in Miami and other Florida cities.

All over the state there is a tremendous rush of building. At a time when the volume of construction is higher than ever before for the whole country, it is highest of all in Florida. "Speculation?" "Overconfidence?" Possibly. But it would be fine if other states and cities had a little more of the faith that moves those Florida people.

Florida is being for the future—a future which may delay longer than the enthusiasts think, but will come sooner or later. Most of America hasn't got beyond trying to catch up with the past, so far as building requirements are concerned.

ROAMERS.

Mike Schilling of Tiffin, O., used to hang around the railroad station chewing tobacco with the other loafers. One morning ten years ago a body was found cut to pieces on the track. It was Mike, the other loafers said. So they buried Mike, who had no visible money or relatives, in the potter's field. Or they thought they did.

Now, just the other day, Mike turned up one morning, chewing tobacco around the station just the same as ever, though a little more philosophical.

"Where you been?" they asked him, when they recovered from the shock and persuaded themselves that there wasn't any ectoplasm about him.

"Been seein' the world!" was all they could get out of him.

Those who have seen most, usually tell least. Many is the lad who has roamed, like Kipling's tramp royal, "for to admire and for to see, for to behold this world so wide." But few of the true roamers have that imaginary hero's gift of communication.

And who was the man they buried? Oh, probably another mute, inglorious roamer.

The churches of the world, if they act together, can end war in this generation. Bishop Breng told the Universal Christian Conference, at Stockholm.

The international Socialists used to say the same thing of the workers of the world.

But when the great war came on, the Socialists of each country were militantly on the side of that country, just as the churches returned to worshipping tribal deities in the name of Jehovah.

International sentiment, by education, may help avert wars.

But really to enforce peace will require organized institutions, too.

Our whole nationalistic world organization has been erected for the exact contrary purpose.

There were wars between tribes, until related tribes got a common high chief. Then greater wars began, between these confederations of tribes.

The cities of ancient Greece warred on each other, as did the cities of medieval Italy. Inter-city wars became unthinkable after states were formed.

States warred on states, and provinces on provinces, until national governments prevented.

Now nations war on nations.

But even international wars were suspended during the era of "Roman peace," when the empire overshadowed the nations.

Whenever the United States of the World is fully established, there can be no more wars between nations.

Since the extinction of war by evolution is a matter of ages, while the preservation of civilization depends on its suppression in a few decades, we must find something quicker.

There is no more room for battlefields in the crowded and shrinking world, and the weapons of war have become too dangerous to trust to the childish impulses which have hitherto ruled mankind.

We have established a reasonable degree of order in cities without waiting to breed populations unanimously capable of self-restraint.

What we have done between individuals, we must now do between nations, classes and races, or take the consequences.

The steps to this end are many. The rest of the world has taken two of them, in the League of Nations and the World Court. We have refused to join in the first of these, but are committed, so far as a democracy can be committed in advance of action, to the second.

Both parties officially, in convention and in Congress, the administrations of two presidents elected by the greatest majority in history, and practically every articulate organization of the unofficial voice of public sentiment—all have spoken.

Never was popular verdict more certain and more nearly unanimous. Everything is already decided except one thing.

That is, whether our representative institutions are representative enough to represent us.

About one-fourth of the senators are irreconcilably opposed. This minority is brilliantly led.

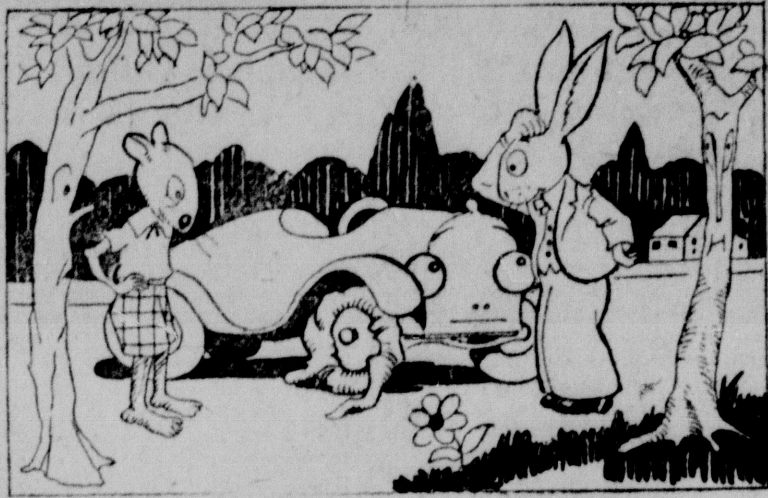

If its leadership and determination can transform its one-fourth into one-third, for some specious plan of ostensible assent on impossible conditions, the will of the people is defeated by the very machinery which we have set up for its expression.

It is by no means certain that this will not happen.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

MISTER BUNNY'S TROUBLES

"Gee! You have had a blowout," said Markie Muskrat.

"Yes Mister Bunny," said the little squirrel boy up in the tree, "you needn't be frightened. Your car made that sound and you weren't shot at all."

"Well, I am certainly glad to hear it," said Mister Bunny fanning himself with his tail. "I guess I am extra nervous today. I jumped about a mile a little while ago when someone opened a bottle and it went 'pop.'"

"What makes you so nervous?" asked Scramble Squirrel curiously.

"My conscience, I suppose, mostly," said Mister Bunny. "You see I just couldn't help slipping into the grass-patch garden this summer to nibble the green things growing there."

"Every time I went I kept saying over and over to myself, 'This is the last time I'll do this. I'll just have my fill of lettuce and greens and carrot tops today and maybe a few young peas. Tomorrow I won't come near it. I'll eat plants and grass and stuff that's free. That's what I will just today. That's all.'"

"What has that got to do with your conscience and your getting shot?" asked Scramble curiously.

"Don't say that word—please," shivered Mister Bunny. "I didn't stop and neither did my children, and Mister Farmer didn't like us. Now whenever I hear a loud noise I shiver. Oh! What was that?"

"Just me cracking a nut," laughed Scramble. "Did you think you were shot again, Mister Bunny?"

"Yes, I certainly did," said poor Mister Bunny. "I am nervous, I tell you."

Pretty soon he was on his way again, the little car rattling up the lane for dear life.

Mister Bunny felt that if he got home safely, that was where he was going to stay for the next hundred years.

"It's a good thing for me to stay at home anyway," he said. "A very good thing. I can save money. When I drive my automobile every day it costs money. Fifteen cents for gasoline one day, eight cents for oil another day, a dollar and a half for a new tire another day, and that's the way it keeps on. I'll save a lot of money by putting my car away until next spring. I can't use it much during the winter anyway, and I

Good Thoughts for Good People

It is his ignorance of Spirit, God, which shuts out the good that is the heritage of God's children everywhere. We can have more of spiritual good just as we enlarge our capacity for the reception of good by gaining a greater understanding of God, Spirit. If one stood near the flood of water continually pouring over Niagara Falls, and held under it a pint measure, the greatest possible volume of water he could receive would be just one pint. Thus it is with spiritual blessings. They are commensurate not with God's bestowal of them, which is infinite, but with the measure of our spiritual understanding.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHRENS

"Come and help me fix it, will you, Markie?" said Mister Bunny getting his spare tire off the back of the car in a hurry. He seemed very happy for a person having to much trouble, though Markie, but he only said,

"Sure!" Markie also thought it queer that Mister Bunny kept talking over and over to himself.

But this is what Mister Bunny was saying, "I'm an old man and have

He meant that it is foolish to worry over things that don't happen.

MILITARY NOT TO BE ALLOWED DICTATORSHIP IN U. S.

—PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

Tells American Legion Convention Civil Officers Decide

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 6.—(AP)—President Coolidge, addressing the American Legion convention here today, declared that the result of the World War will be lost and the nations of the world will prepare for another conflict unless racial antagonisms are demolished and a universal attitude of tolerance is created.

"If our country is to have any position of leadership," he added, "I must it may be in that direction, and I believe that the place where it should begin is at home."

Asserting that no nation ever had or ever will have an army large enough to guarantee it against attack in time of peace or to insure its victory in war, the President said that "peace and security are more likely to result from fair and honorable feelings and mutual agreements for the limitation of armaments among the nations than by any attempt at competition in squadrons and battalions."

"No doubt this country," he continued, "could, if it wished to spend more money, make a better military force, but that is only part of the problem that confronts the government. The real question is whether spending more money to make a better military force would really make a better country."

Military Art Patriotic
"I would be the last to disparage the military art. It is an honorable and patriotic calling of the highest rank. But I can see no merit in any unnecessary expenditure of money to hire men to build fleets and carry muskets when international relations and agreements permit the turning of such resources into the making of good roads, the building of better homes, the promotion of education and all the other arts of peace which minister to the advancement of human welfare."

Avoiding direct reference to any specific situation, Mr. Coolidge expressed the opinion that military power should be subordinated to and governed by civil authority, and continued:

"It is for this reason that any organization of men in the military service bent on inflaming the public mind for the purpose of forcing government action through the pressure of public opinion is an exceedingly dangerous undertaking and precedent. This is so whatever form it might take, whether it be for the purpose of influencing the executive, the legislature, or the heads of departments."

Must Not Dictate
"It is for the civil authority to determine what appropriations shall be granted, what appointments shall be made, and what rules shall be adopted for the conduct of its armed forces. Whenever the military power starts dictating to the civil authority, by whatever means adopted, the liberties of the country are beginning to end. National defense should at all times be supported, but any form of militarism should be resisted."

Advocating a selective service act which would authorize broad mobilization in emergencies of all the country's resources, both persons and materials, the President declared that in time of war, power should be lodged somewhere for the stabilization of prices "as far as the might be possible in justice to the country and its defenders."

"But it will always be impossible to harmonize justice and war," he continued. "It is always possible to purchase materials with money, but patriotism can not be purchased. Unless the people are willing to defend their country because of their belief in it, because of their affection for it, and because it is representative of their home, their country can not be defended."

"If we are looking for a more complete reign of justice, a more complete supremacy of law, a more complete social harmony, we must seek it in the paths of peace. Progress in these directions under the present order of the world is not likely to be made except during a state of domestic and international tranquility. One of the great questions before the nations today is how to promote such tranquility."

United Purpose Needed
Declaring that one of the most natural reactions during the war was intolerance, the necessity for a common purpose and a united intellectual front becoming paramount, Mr. Coolidge said that when the need for such solidarity is past there should be a "quick and generous readiness to revert to the old and normal habits of thought."

"There should be an intellectual demobilization as well as a military demobilization," he declared. "Progress depends very largely on the encouragement of variety. Whatever tends to standardize the community, to establish fixed and rigid modes of thought, tends to fossilize society. If we all believed the same thing and thought the same thoughts and applied the same valuations to all the occurrences about us, we should reach a state of equilibrium closely akin to an intellectual and spiritual paralysis. It is the ferment of ideas, the clash of disagreeing judgments, the privilege of the individual to develop his own thoughts and shape his own character, that makes progress possible."

"In this period of after-war rigidity, suspicion, and intolerance our own country has not been exempt from unfortunate experiences. Thanks to our comparative isolation, we have known less of the international frictions and rivalries than some other countries less fortunately situated. But among some of the varying racial, religious, and social groups of our people there have been manifestations of an intolerance of opinion, or narrowness of outlook, a fixity of judgment against which we may well be warned."

Freedom in Religion
"It is not easy to conceive of anything that would be more unfortunate in a community based upon the ideals of which Americans boast than any considerable development of intolerance as regards religion. To a great extent this country owes its beginnings to the determination of our hardy ancestors to maintain complete freedom in religion. Instead of a state church we have decreed that every citizen shall be free to follow the dictates of his own conscience as to his religious beliefs and affiliations. Under that guaranty we have erected a system which certainly is justified by its fruits. Under no other could we have dared to invite the peoples of all countries and creeds to come here and unite with us in creating the state of which we are all citizens."

"But having invited them here, having accepted their great and varied contributions to the building of the nation, it is for us to maintain in all good faith those liberal institutions and traditions which have been so productive of good. The bringing together of all these different national, racial, religious and cultural elements has made our country a kind of composite of the rest of the world, and we can render no greater service than by demonstrating the possibility of harmonious cooperation among so many various groups. Every one of them has something characteristic and significant of great value to cast into the common fund of our material, intellectual, and spiritual resources."

"If we are to have that harmony and tranquility, that union of spirit which is the foundation of real national genius and national progress, we must all realize that there are true Americans who did not happen to be born in our section of the country, who do not attend our place of religious worship, who are not of our racial stock, or who are not proficient in our language. If we are to create on this continent a free republic and an enlightened civilization that will be capable of reflecting the true greatness and glory of mankind, it will be necessary to regard these differences as accidental and unessential. We shall have to look beyond the outward manifestations of race and creed. Divine Providence has not bestowed upon any race a monopoly of patriotism and character."

"The same principle that it is necessary to apply to the attitude of mind among our own people it is also necessary to apply to the attitude of mind among the different nations. During the war we were required not only to put a strong emphasis on everything that appealed to our own national pride but an equally strong emphasis on that which tended to disparage other people. There was an intensive cultivation of animosities and hatreds and enmities, together with a blind appeal to force, that took possession of substantially all the peoples of the earth. Of course, these ministered to the war spirit. They supplied the incentive for destruction, the motive for conquest."

How Make U. S. First?
"But in time of peace these sentiments are not helps but hindrances; they are not constructive. The generally expressed desire of 'America first' can not be criticized. It is a perfectly correct aspiration for our people to cherish. But the problem which we have to solve is how to make America first. It can not be done by the cultivation of national jealousy, arrogance, or selfishness. Hatreds, jealousies and suspicions will not be productive of any benefits in this direction."

"Here again we must apply the rule of tolerance. Because there are other peoples whose ways are not our ways, and whose thoughts are not our thoughts, we are not warranted in drawing the conclusion that they are adding nothing to the sum of civilization. We can make little contribution to the welfare of humanity on the theory that we are a superior people and all others are an inferior people. We do not need to be too loud in the assertion of our own righteousness."

"It is true that we live under most favorable circumstances. But before we come to the final and irrevocable decision that we are better than everybody else we need to consider what we might do if we had their provocations and their difficulties. We are not likely to improve our own condition or help humanity very much until we come to the sympathetic understanding that human nature is about the same everywhere, that it is rather evenly distributed over the surface of the earth, and that we are all united in a common brotherhood."

"We can only make America first in the true sense which that means by cultivating a spirit of friendship and good will, by the exercise of the virtues of patience and forbearance, by being 'placatus in mercy' and through progress at home and helplessness abroad standing as an example of real service to humanity."

The second famous Park theater of New York was burned in 1843.

One woman was killed and fifty hurt when two sections of the Dixie flyer, crack train of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad were wrecked near Chattanooga. The photograph above shows the engine and baggage car in a field more than 50 feet from the track.

ways, and whose thoughts are not our thoughts, we are not warranted in drawing the conclusion that they are adding nothing to the sum of civilization. We can make little contribution to the welfare of humanity on the theory that we are a superior people and all others are an inferior people. We do not need to be too loud in the assertion of our own righteousness."

"It is true that we live under most favorable circumstances. But before we come to the final and irrevocable decision that we are better than everybody else we need to consider what we might do if we had their provocations and their difficulties. We are not likely to improve our own condition or help humanity very much until we come to the sympathetic understanding that human nature is about the same everywhere, that it is rather evenly distributed over the surface of the earth, and that we are all united in a common brotherhood."

"We can only make America first in the true sense which that means by cultivating a spirit of friendship and good will, by the exercise of the virtues of patience and forbearance, by being 'placatus in mercy' and through progress at home and helplessness abroad standing as an example of real service to humanity."

The second famous Park theater of New York was burned in 1843.

The price of a coat depends upon the costs of its cloth, its trimmings, the fluctuation of Fashion, and workmanship.

There have been seasons when Fashion's demands were extravagant and other seasons when Fashion was simplicity itself. The first costly; the latter not at all. The wool crop, the cotton crop, the silk yield, the fur catch, all affect the price of materials, linings and trimmings.

Yet, whatever the market conditions, or the vagaries of Fashion, the ruling prices of the day are the best values obtainable by manufacturer, by merchant retailer or by ultimate purchaser. Please understand—and we want to make it as emphatic as can be—that the values offered here are as fine as may be found anywhere in all the country and, we are very sure, quite matchless in Dixon.

We offer a very good selection of inexpensive coats at from

$17.50 to $37.50

and of coats of better materials at from

$42.50 to $62.50

and of finer coats, up to the very finest, at

and in every case the workmanship—regardless of price—is good beyond question.

C. D. Odum, General Manager of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus says: "THAT every substantial, worthwhile idea, with the touch of 'Better than its Neighbor' in the factory, store, bank, farm or in horse sale stables, yea, in the very Government and the Army, had its birth on the circus lot. Didn't Adam have the first performance—a show for the earth? Didn't Noah have the first menagerie? Lasting ideas came from these cradles."

"THAT every excellent idea as to movement and transportation that prevailed in the recent World War was patterned after circus movements, and circus-bred and developed. World War soldiers prove invaluable in every way."

"THAT every army man should know the circus scheme of picking sites, putting up tents and feeding men. The business world needs the circus idea of trucks and tractors which haul five wagons at one time. Bankers should possess the circus way of protecting against bad money, of telling it by sight alone. Y. M. C. A. organizations would do well to master the knots a circusman ties. These are not in the books, not on the exhibited wall boards of knots. The circus way of foretelling weather would really help Uncle Sam's weather bureau. To know how to walk around a horse, and to know its every defect would be valuable to the layman."

"THAT there probably never would have been a municipal light plant had not the circus first adopted an electric light plant of its own, so well developed now that light is 75 per cent cheaper than any other known light, and by it, colors can be matched and programs can be read in its shadows. Have cities and corporations thus developed their plants?"

"THAT advertising is a most valuable asset to the circus. It maintains publicity experts at great cost. The whole secret of its success bases on

WHY have so many said "I'LL KEEP IT"?

OVER 200,000 women became MAYTAG owners this past year—and why?

Was it because of claims made for the MAYTAG or good things promised? Was it price, enticing concessions or the result of high pressure, "get the order at any cost" type of personal salesmanship?

No—not one of these.

—it was the remarkable, self-sellability of the Gyrafoam itself—the MAYTAG self-sale plan—that's the answer.

Over 200,000 housewives asked to have a MAYTAG brought to their home. No obligation came with it.

For homes without electricity the Maytag Gyrafoam is available with Gasoline Multi-Motor.

Silk, linens, woollens (denims, everything was to be washed—not one piece, gauzy or bulky, was to be withheld from the test of the turbulent, flushing soap and water force within the smooth walls of the MAYTAG'S cast-aluminum tub.

"Shall we take it back?" they were asked when the week's wash was done. "I'll keep it" was the answer. That answer will be yours if you let the MAYTAG do this week's wash for you.

9 Outstanding Maytag Features

- 1—Washes faster. The Gyrafoam Principle creates a more highly energized, turbulent and continuously effective water action. No idle water.
- 2—Washes cleaner. The Gyrafoam Principle mixes the soap evenly through the water, and forces the super-cleaning, scupper washing solution through the meshes of the clothes. No idle suds.
- 3—Largest hourly capacity in world—50 lbs. ordinary family wash per hour. Tub holds 21 gallons—4 gallons more than ordinary washers.
- 4—Most compact washer made—takes floor space only 25 inches square.
- 5—Cast aluminum tub—can't warp, rust, rot, swell, split nor corrode.
- 6—Easily adjusted to YOUR height, and height of tubs.
- 7—Clothes can be put in or taken out while washer is running.
- 8—Tub cleans itself in 30 seconds.
- 9—Metal swinging wringer. Low. Swings into 7 positions. Adjusts itself automatically for handkerchiefs or blankets. Automatic drain-board. Instant tension-release. All parts enclosed.

TOWN, WIPED OFF MAP, IS RESTORED THREE MILES AWAY

Judge Decided Land is Oil
Company's and Made
Town Move

By NEA Service

Sheridan, Wyo.—Just eight months ago the town of Old Lavoye, Wyo., was doing a business of $3,000,000 a year. Property in the town was valued at $775,000.

Today there isn't as much as a shack to mark the spot where once the town of 1500 people stood. In place of the hotels, stores and homes stand only tall grease-covered derricks. For it was "black gold" that literally forced Old Lavoye off the map.

A New Town

Already three miles distant a new Lavoye has been built. Some of the buildings were moved there intact, others were torn down and rebuilt and some weren't worth moving.

The story is one of the most unusual arising out of the numerous battles for oil in the otherwise barren lands of the west.

For a time it was feared this dispute would cause armed warfare in the Wyoming oil fields.

In 1920, Joseph Lavoye, a French-Canadian, applied for a homestead on the site of Old Lavoye, but never received the final patent to the land.

Then came a great oil boom in the rich Salt Creek field. The homestead was in the heart of the field.

Lavoye leased lots to build stores and the town sprung up with the typical overnight rapidity of a trading center in the oil fields. Prices were high and Lavoye was getting rich fast.

All the geologists said great quantities of oil were underneath the town.

The tall oil derricks came closer and closer to the town. The Ohio Oil Co., which had the oil rights to surrounding oil lands, wanted to drill a well on the main corner of the town.

The townspeople objected and the company filed its suit to wipe out the entire town.

Lavoye fought it through the courts until his funds were exhausted. Then the townspeople took up the fight. Appeals were made to Washington without avail.

Finally Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy, who decided Teapot Dome belonged to Harry Sinclair, decided that the townsite belonged to the oil company and ordered that it be vacated.

Revolt Was Feared

The decision stirred the oil fields almost to the point of revolt, but the townspeople finally decided to abide by the decree.

The new town has been built almost as quickly as the old one, but it is not Old Lavoye. But there isn't a much cleaner and more attractive derrick in sight, and the ground on which the new town stands is as yet worth nothing compared to the riches which underlaid Old Lavoye.

Meanwhile, at Old Lavoye, "black gold" continues to come from the earth, but its founder is getting no share of the treasure.

The fight is over, but it has left bitter sores that may cause unrest in the oil fields for many years.

Three Killed in Gun

Battle in Road House

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 5—(AP)—Three men were shot and killed in a terrific pistol fight at a road house near Upper Creve Coeur Lake, St. Louis county early today. James Quinn, one of the proprietors, said he killed the three men single handed. The dead are Vincent Goodale, 21, Don Jean Hoffman, 24, and James Tully.

The slain men were known to the police as gangsters.

Quinn, who was unhurt, told authorities the shooting resulted from an attempted holdup and he was under fire not only of the men killed, but of two others who escaped. Quinn is 34 years old and a former member of the navy. Although the bodies of the dead men, bearing 17 wounds, seemed to indicate expert firing, Quinn declares he had never before fired a shot.

OLD AGE IS NOT DISEASE PASTOR SAYS IN SERMON

Father of Former Minister of Christian Church Preaches

"Old age is not a disease," as Seneca wrote, no more than autumn can be called a disease of spring," declared John Garland Waggoner, Sr., at the Christian church Sunday, in his masterful sermon on "Growing Old." Now in his 82nd year, this veteran of more than three score years' preaching, without eye-glasses, erect, and vigorous, exalted (not defended) old age as the ripening-time of life.

"Let not your heart be troubled" (John 14-1) was his text, spoken, as he explained, in opposite fashion to our use of it in funerals, by one about to die, to those who were to live and labor.

"Old age, too," he said, "is for the Christian a time of glory and honor. Dr. A. J. Gordon's beautiful story of 'The Devil has no Happy Old People' is ever true; but God's saints rejoice more and more as the wonderful end of their pilgrimage draws near. I dare offer a parody on the well known verses, 'Backward, turn backward! Forward, move onward, O Time in thy flight. The Kingdom of Glory is almost in sight! Heav'nward, move heav'nward! We surely can see The best of it all is what yet is to be.'"

Mr. Waggoner made tender reference to the kindness of the Dixon congregation to his lamented son, H. G. Waggoner, whose death cut short his ministry here, and whose son, John Garland, Jr., is now a senior in Eureka College, and preaching every Sunday.

LEE COUNTY JAIL IS HORRIBLE EX- AMPLE: FR. STORY

Rector of St. Luke's in Attack on Prison in Sunday Sermon

The Lee county jail was held up as a "horrible example" by Father C. Carlton Story of St. Luke's Episcopal church, in a sermon on "Deliver Us From Evil" at his church Sunday. "The whole jail situation in our country is out of date and antique," the clergyman said. "Think of the thousands of little county jails where multitudes of men and women spend months in enforced idleness, with nothing to do whatever. Is it any wonder that vice and villainy prey on them? It is an old proverb that the devil finds work for idle hands to do. There should be work for every prisoner, work beyond the few minutes involved in cleaning out his cell. Our own county jail is a horrible example. It is ancient and impossible to keep clean. It lacks light and ventilation. No man was ever improved by keeping him in a vile place, where men pass the time by sitting on top of their cells to get a little air and light, playing cards and regurgitating vile stories for months on end, where the toilets and plumbing are hopelessly out of date; where, in the women's side of the jail, stands a rusty bathtub without any provision for privacy. I know whereof I speak."

"I have visited it several times. The sheriff is not to blame. It has been condemned year after year, but we get nowhere. Vile places make vile people. If they were bad when they went there they are worse when they come out. If our women's clubs of the city would make up a select delegation and go around and study it some afternoon, and imagine any woman cooped up in such a place, they would see what I mean. To my mind that would be a much better employment than studying George Eliot. They would be doing some effective work to create better conditions for erring women of today."

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTES

The Young People's Choir and Orchestra work Sunday night brought credit to them and to Miss Floto, director. An anthem was sung, "The Lord Is In His Holy Temple," and a chorus with duet by Estherelle Mercer and Lucille Stauffer. The beautiful and optimistic message of the noble octogenarian preacher, J. G. Waggoner, of Canton, Ill., who stated that his first sermon was preached 50 years ago last March, was in charming harmony with the buoyancy of the youthful singers. It was a service long to be remembered by the large audience.

Bro. Waggoner left Monday morning for the International Convention of Christian Churches, which convenes in Oklahoma City, Oct. 6-11.

THE LIMITED MAIL

By ELMER E. VANCE
Novel by William Basil Courtney

Copyright, 1925, Warner Bros.
"THE LIMITED MAIL" with Monte Blue, is a pictorialization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS
Bob Wilson, young college graduate who suddenly turned tramp, has been induced by Jim Fowler to remain in Crater City and now has a job with the railroad. There is much mystery about him and his past life and the advent into the town of the handsome hobo is a source of universal gossip and speculation. Going to the lunch room in the station one morning he is surprised to find many of the night workers remaining for breakfast and detects a general air of expectancy.

CHAPTER V—Continued

Lost in his own reflections and reading he neither noticed that the voice was new and unfamiliar nor looked up when he said,
"Good morning, Minnie. Ham and eggs, turned up—toast and coffee—and bring me grapefruit first, please."

The menfolk of Crater City had long since accepted Bob on the strength of his knowledge and his fists; the children and dogs for his character. But grapefruit for breakfast and addition to the only parts of the morning newspaper that nobody else in Crater City ever thought of reading were habits—duly broadcasted by the lunch-room's loud speaker, Miss Anemone Trisk, the arid cashier—that kept fresh in the romance-scented noses of the town's fairest creatures a tantalizing aroma of secrecy and an unplumbed past safeguarded behind the unassailable twin brown forts of his smiling yet sad eyes.

An unpracticed shoving of dishes under and against his paper came only as a signal to Bob, not as an annoying distraction. He mechanically picked up a spoon without having noticed the unresponsiveness of the service, and in absent-mindedness, born of a greater hunger for the news upon which his eyes were feasting, scooped up a spoonful of—waffles!

He was actually on the second bite before it came to him that the "grapefruit" had a most peculiar taste indeed.

"What the devil! Say, where did these leather flaps come from—Minnie, you're getting dumber by the minute—I—I—beg your pardon, Miss!"

He had been vocally castigating the waitress without really seeing her, had taken her sameness for granted, and though his eyes were upon her yet they were vacant with the lingering mental warmth of line upon line of printed words. He was conscious of an uncommon error in the order, not of an uncommon personality involved. The period of transition in his mind from reading to seeing was not rapid; he had been talking and staring with a frown full into the girl's face for perhaps ten seconds before the phenomenon that was the cause of Crater City's latest epidemic struck him. Then the face seemed to rush into dazzling nearness and clearness before his tardily focusing eyes. The naked surface of his brain was burned by a flooding light of raw beauty, unintercepted and undisturbed by the too feeble and inadequate lenses of his eyes. He was suddenly blinded to all else but a lustrous picture of blanching ivory and old gold—a exquisite crystallization of the pelucid moulding, the classic refinement, the delicate coloring of a rare cameo.

Bob's impatient front mercurially became a sackcloth grin.

"I'm sorry—so sorry—Miss. I thought you were Minnie, the usual waitress here."

But the sting of his original criticism had made the first and deepest impression upon the girl, who was flustered and on edge from the experience of a trying morning of unaccustomed work; her cheeks were stained by a nervous flush.

"Oh, I remember what you wanted—it was stupid of me." She wearily reached for the waffles, to rectify her mistake.

Over the girl's confusion Bob bridged his own return to self-possession.

"I'm glad you brought the waffles—I meant to order them. Doctor told me I ought to eat waffles three times a day. Please leave them—and don't worry about it—" he smiled contritely.

"You're only saying that!" she charged, defensively suspicious. "I'd much prefer to take them back and fetch what you ordered."

Bob playfully stuck a fork through the nest of flat cakes. "They're mine!" he insisted firmly, adding a white lie in the eternal masculine martyrdom to bungling but pretty woman-kind, "and they're just what I wanted!"

The defensiveness was stamped out of her pride under the prancing hoofs of his running smiles and chuckles and good-natured banter. With shy reluctance she relinquished her hold on the waffle plate.

"It's very nice of you—but are you sure?"

"Just as sure as I'm sure that I'm not here at all—that I'm still in bed, sleeping, having a beautiful dream."

"Do you want your coffee now?" she asked.

"The soul hunger of five starved years of exile in the barren society of this railroad town in the mountains impelled Bob on in a freedom of spirit and speech that would have been utterly foreign to his inhibitions in the old days. He tilted his chair back and said to her with the swift frankness of unconcealed admiration:

"I've heard of sights for sore eyes, but you're the first genuine cure I've seen!"

"Do you want your coffee now," she repeated, severely. Then, "Please—Mr. Bramley is watching us. I've made so many mistakes this morning."

"I don't blame Bramley, or anybody else, for watching you." Sudden tears of nervous disappointment and impatience welled behind the long lashes that fringed her blue eyes like Lebanon cedars around Grecian temples.

"When I first saw you I thought you seemed a bit different—than these others," she said in a low tone, "but I must have been mistaken. You're repeating the same things, in better words, that I've been hearing all morning. You're making it very difficult for me. See, here's the manager now—" The girl pretended to be wiping the table adjacent to Bob's place, and said in a louder tone, "Very well, I'll bring your coffee now!"

Bramley stroiled up and nodded to Bob with the supercilious deference of a maitre d'hotel to a good and orderly customer.

"Where's Minnie?" fished Bob, really wishing to congratulate Bramley on his choice in the new girl but feeling that it would be sacrilegious to discuss her in an over-the-table offhand manner.

"Sick. Too much for her alone, anyway. When she comes back, now, there'll be two of 'em. Telegraphed to main office and they sent this green girl up yesterday—don't encourage us taking on local girls as a rule, you know. They know too many, and flirt too much," he confided significantly.

"What's her name?" asked Bob innocently.

"Caroline—Caroline Dale. Say, what's got into you to eat waffles for breakfast?" It was part of Bramley's professional boast that he knew the epicurean habits of his "regulars."

"Finest thing in the world—for breakfast. And I've been missing them all these years," Bob lamented.

Bramley shrugged and strolled over to clean up a table after two untidy brackens in his gingerly "I don't really have to do this—but just-to-show-I'm-not-too-proud" manner. And at this moment the new girl returned bearing a cup of coffee for Bob.

RIGHT HANDERS TO TAKE UP BOX WORK IN OPENING BATTLE

Johnson and Meadows to Oppose Each Other in First Game

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 6.—(AP)—The hopes of two champion baseball clubs have been placed in the arms of right handed pitchers. Stanley Harris, youthful manager of the Washington Senators has announced Walter Johnson as his choice for the opening game of the world series tomorrow at 2 p. m., while Bill McKechnie, Pirate leader, has nominated Lee Meadows and Vic Aldridge for the opening tussle.

McKechnie has not decided upon the order of his moundmen's appearance and Harris, although optimistic, conveyed doubt as to the ability of Stanley Coveleskie to assume the burden in the second encounter. Yet, all indications point to a clash between Johnson and Meadows on opening day to be followed by Coveleskie-Aldridge duel, leaving the third game rivalry to the sturdy left handers of the clubs, Dutch Ruether of the Senators and Emil Yoe, youthful Pirate.

Kremer May Get Chance.
In case of rain, Ray Kremer, Pacific Coast man of might, may go to the firing line for Pittsburgh tomorrow, or perhaps Aldridge will be the selection. If Meadows appears in the box, it will be the first time in any world's series that a bespectacled pitcher has taken the mound.

Injury may play a part in the drama about to be unfolded. The two second basemen, Manager Harris of the Senators and Eddie Moore of the Pirates will be handicapped by lame digits. Moore injured the thumb on his throwing hand in the last game of the season against Cincinnati on Sunday, and yesterday did not appear for practice with his mates. Harris' swollen as the result of a spike wound some time ago. He says that the injury will not handicap him. Both Harris and Moore, however, are certain to start the series.

Peck Has Game Leg.
The Washington manager admitted on arrival here that Coveleskie had suffered somewhat from a sore back, but declared that the hero of the series of 1920 between Cleveland and Brooklyn, would be ready to take his turn. Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran shortstop, who has proved one of the main cogs in the machine that has carried through to two straight pennants in the American League and a world's series conquest with the New York Giants, will enter the battle with a weak right leg.

Last year, in the classic, he found the pace too much and gave way to Bluege. Ralph Miller took Bluege's post and failed to plug the gap effectively.

The Senators face the Pirates tomorrow, however, with a starting reserve corps which includes the record making Everett Scott, veteran of championship battles.

Can Seat 45,000.
Extra seats have been piled in almost every section of the enclosure and it is expected that 45,000 can be accommodated here.

In attempting to handle an eager throng, Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, reports that a full half million dollars have been turned back, more than 200,000 having applied for 45,000 seats. An enthusiasm pent up for sixteen long years is about to burst forth as the hopes of Pirate voters follow their favorites into action.

Facts Fancies of World Series

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Ten millions from coast to coast and Canada to the Gulf, will hear world's series radio reports or watch the progress of the championship games between Pittsburgh and Washington by player board, according to estimates based on record breaking arrangements for distributing the story and picture of the battles. Weather reports are for "rain and cooler" tomorrow, opening day, but fans are hoping they can chalk up an error for the forecaster.

If it is a moist day, Manager Duffy Harris of the Senators may wish he had decided to use Stanley Coveleskie, his spit ball twirler, instead of Walter Johnson on the mound.

At least a half dozen members of the rival teams, including Manager McKechnie and Harris themselves, will furnish newspaper articles of the games, but no charges have been lodged against them under the player-writer rules.

Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania will toss out the first ball. No one has yet called a strike on this annual play.

"One Eyed" Connelly, traveling light, arrived overnight from New York. He predicted Washington would win, but refused to disclose the methods he will employ to "crash the gate" at Forbes Field, except to declare he would be there as usual.

Honus Wagner, famous shortstop of the Pirates when they won their last National League pennant and captured the world's series in 1909, has given up politics for journalism temporarily and will write newspaper accounts of the series.

"Well, boys, I'm here for the riot," Nick Altrock, comedian-coach of the Senators shouted as he stepped off the train from the capital. "I'm in the best shape of my career and ready to take a regular turn in the box."

OHIO'S CHANCES TO TRIM CHICAGO ARE NOT SO GOOD
The Washington manager admitted on arrival here that Coveleskie had suffered somewhat from a sore back, but declared that the hero of the series of 1920 between Cleveland and Brooklyn, would be ready to take his turn. Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran shortstop, who has proved one of the main cogs in the machine that has carried through to two straight pennants in the American League and a world's series conquest with the New York Giants, will enter the battle with a weak right leg.

Last year, in the classic, he found the pace too much and gave way to Bluege. Ralph Miller took Bluege's post and failed to plug the gap effectively.

The Senators face the Pirates tomorrow, however, with a starting reserve corps which includes the record making Everett Scott, veteran of championship battles.

Wilce's Star Back is Out of Game With Broken Leg
Extra seats have been piled in almost every section of the enclosure and it is expected that 45,000 can be accommodated here.

In attempting to handle an eager throng, Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, reports that a full half million dollars have been turned back, more than 200,000 having applied for 45,000 seats. An enthusiasm pent up for sixteen long years is about to burst forth as the hopes of Pirate voters follow their favorites into action.

CURED HIS RUPTURE.
I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 285 M. Marcellus Avenue, Manassas, N. J., Better out out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

the Hoosiers in the strenuous work-outs for Michigan.

Other conference squads carded with outside teams are looking more toward coming big ten games, than they are themselves. Wisconsin thinks Franklin will be easy as an appetizer for Michigan.

Purdue's disastrous start against Wabash is not a damper on the spirits of the Bollermakers, whose conference standing is not affected. De Pauw is its opponent on Saturday.

Reports from Tom Lieb, assistant coach, from the Army-Detroit game, are being considered by Knute Rockne at Notre Dame in deciding his musketeers for the potential generals. The Heloit game this week end is causing little concern.

SPORT BRIEFS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Chicago—Vice President Dawes made an unaccepted offer to caddy for one of the golf stars entered in the international open women's tournament at Indian Hill.

Pittsburgh—Walter Johnson, grand old man of the Washington Senators hurling staff, will pitch the opener against the Pirates.

New Haven, Conn.—Four Yale varsity crews reported for fall practice, including four members of last year's championship eight.

St. Paul, Minn.—Nick Allen has signed to manage the St. Paul American Association club again next year.

Lexington, Ky.—Arden Homestead's Peter Matthey, driven by Will Dickerson, won the $301 renewal of the Kentucky Futurity for 2 year olds.

Tokio, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The University of Chicago baseball team today defeated the team of Keio University, 3-2.

548 Millions Lost in Fire in U. S. Last Annum
Five hundred forty-eight million dollars was the tax paid last year by the citizens of the United States in fire destruction. It is difficult to realize the proportions of this loss. One way in which it may be visualized is to imagine a row of paper dollars placed end to end of such length it would more than twice encircle the globe. Assume that on January 1st one end of this line of dollar bills is ignited, the flame being communicated to the adjoining bill, thence to the next and so on for a whole year until finally on December 31st the last dollar note is reduced to ashes. For every bill thus burned up along this "imaginary trail of flame," the equivalent value in actual property is destroyed by fire in the United States each year.

Recognizing the urgent necessity of keeping fire waste as low as possible, the National Fire Waste Council and the Insurance Department of the National Chamber of Commerce are sponsoring a competition known as the Inter-Chamber Fire Waste Contest among more than 400 cities in all parts of the country. The results obtained in the cities reporting in the Contest coincident with their participation in continuous fire prevention programs have indicated fire losses may be decreased through concerted effort. # THE LIMITED MAIL

 Novel by William Basil Courtney

Copyright, 1925, Warner Bros.
 "THE LIMITED MAIL" with Monte Blue, is a picturization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Wilson, a young college graduate who suddenly turned tramp, has procured a job as freeman on the railroad and is making his home in Crater City. He is a source of mystery and speculation to the whole town. Going to the station lunch room for breakfast one morning he is surprised to find a new waitress there and finds himself strangely attracted by this "lustrous picture of blanchet ivory and old gold."

"I want you to know I'm sorry that I annoyed you," said Bob hastily, in a penitent and intense voice. She placed his coffee, and turned to go away.

"Er-r, Miss—Miss Dale, please don't be angry," he begged miserably. She hesitated, resting the rim of her tray on a far corner of the table, and looked at him steadily. "My rudeness came from—my surprise at seeing anyone so nice as you in this place, after all these years."

"You are not a native, then?" she asked in a forgiving, tentatively interested way, after a brief scrutiny.

Bob shook his head negatively and started to put sugar cubes in his coffee. He felt on terms of good fellowship with the whole wide world, the June scents of which wafted through the open windows a lulling message of awakened, sun-nourished things. The distilling forces of an arid nature were at work with rolled-up sleeves on the second growth enthusiasms in Bob's soul.

"That's what I said, cutie," Miss Trisk assured her.

"I hope that after you've seen more of me here you won't mind if I ask you—if I want you to—if I ask you to be friends," he ventured, continuing to put sugar cubes into his coffee.

"Is that a threat or a promise?" she laughed, genuinely amused by his cautious approach.

Bob laughed, too. They had a second laugh then, together. Miss Trisk, who had not missed a trick, did not laugh; nor did Bramley. The one looked jealous; the other, resigned. Their opportunity for hilarity came within a minute, though, when a wild-eyed call boy dashed into the room, came to a disgusted and panting stop when he spotted Bob and the waitress, who were lost to all superficial influences, then advanced toward them and spoke sarcastically.

"Wilson, I've searched all over for you. Morran's going to send your train out with a sub if you ain't there in half a shake. He's down in the yard chewin' an oil can now, and six-inch sparks is comin' outen his eyes. I wouldn't want to be in your shoes. Sign here, please!"

Bob gasped in panic as he saw the time. Twenty minutes to eight! Ten minutes past the scheduled start of his run. He signed the call book, jumped up, smiled at Caroline and hurried away. The memory of the look of concern on her face—as though she were fearful that, somehow, it was all her fault and that he would get into trouble on account of her—stopped him at the door. He went back, shook hands with her, then departed—all in a laughing, excited, happy rush that even the expectation of being struck by bolts' verbal lightning could not despoil. Luckily, his day's job was on a local freight, and while a delay was serious enough it was not vital or unforgivable.

In the whirlwind of his departing wake Caroline Dale stood looking with a guilty yet happy smile at the table he had vacated and the breakfast he had left untouched but for the single bite of waffles that had been, well—the cause of it all! A soggy, dank pyramid of sugar, the entire contents of the sugar crock which Bob had absent-mindedly transferred piece by piece into his coffee cup, was a sweet monument to the gay havoc she had wrought upon his mental processes.

"Gee, kid, you're a fast worker!" complimented Miss Trisk, backhandedly, a little later. "You're the first one who ever vamped Bob Wilson into looking as though he knew that such things as girls existed in this here mortal plane."

"Vamped him, why what do you mean?" said Caroline, aggrieved.

"That's your line, huh—sweet baby innocence—budding daughter asking mama 'how do cats get kittens' stuff. And yet, I've known others to pull that pose on him and never get past his jumper buckles."

Caroline swam deftly aside from the current of Miss Trisk's supernaturated sex lore. "Is that his name—Bob Wilson?"

"Righto, cutie—but the rest of the family statistics I can't give you," she volunteered cattily. "He's been the Elinor Glyn mystery of this burg so long we ain't hoping no more to solve it."

Now Caroline was young, remarkably pretty, and intelligent—Life's rarest triangle—inevitably and industriously romantic. All in all, here was a nature vibrantly responsive to the lift and the warm urgings of the petal-sweetened spring air; and she was vividly aware that the young man had somehow deposited with her a glowing consciousness of his own freshly youthful, clean-cut good looks even in the undapper habiliments of his daily toil. He was the one bright tracing in the drab pattern of her first impressions of this town and its sweaty, swearing, careless bustle. Miss Trisk's alluring hints about Bob constituted a bracing challenge to Caroline's spirit, and she met it eagerly, dissembling with the sex craft of a thousand centuries, cloaking her real interest under a coy air of casualness so well done that it even fooled herself—but not Miss Trisk.

"A real, honest-to-goodness mystery? How interesting!"

"Yeah, ain't it?" drily.

"Surely he has some relatives that you know of—someone he writes to or visits?"

"Not so's you could notice it. But you can't never tell about them tramps—"

"Tramp!" in horror.

"That's what I said, cutie," Miss Trisk assured her, with comfortable satisfaction in her own swordsmanship. "He was a plain, ordinary bum when he first came to this town."

The thin cashier paused to enjoy her sport, and Caroline inwardly writhed while she fought to check an outward show of too obvious disappointment. He had been a tramp! Picturesque and mystifying, but rather rough. She could feel a racing of hot blood to her cheeks; for the rest, however, she was able to meet Miss Trisk's narrowed eyes on a cool level.

"Then I think he deserves all the credit in the world for staying and living down his past!" she maintained bravely.

Admiration for the girl's steadfastness in her interest softened Miss Trisk's mood; admiration, and a keen sense of the communal debt to Bob Wilson.

"He saved the Limited Mail one night, and after that it wasn't no trick for him to get a job around here for he stood aced high with the trainmen, and the homelooks too, because, believe me, there'd have been crepe on many a door only for him. Gee, they'd have given him the keys to the city," she finished, with an attempt at humor to cover a panicky realization that it was her own emotions that were in full cry now.

"Only it wasn't locked, and there ain't no key for it anyhow."

Caroline felt unaccountably proud of this man she had met but once, and then in a business way. Meanwhile, Miss Trisk's mood had undergone a complete change. Perhaps it was the fragrant outdoor breeze that had touched her thin cheeks, too; but to her it carried, instead of pubescent impulses, only reminiscent echoes coming hollowly back through dim years to a sterile present and future.

The One Who Forgot

By RUBY M. AYRES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PETER LYSTER has lost his memory from shell-shock on the Western Front. Upon return to his home from France he fails to recognize

NAN MARRABY, the girl to whom he became engaged before leaving for France. Nan has returned to her home, but is still in touch with her friend

JOAN ENDICOTT, whose husband is spending a few days in London on business. Nan meets

JOHN ARNOTT, a fellow officer with Peter, who informs her that he is spending a few days at the home of his widow sister and that Peter is with him. Nan is jealous of Arnett's sister and annoyed by the attention of

HARLEY SEFTON, a money lender who has been visiting her father. Sefton has now come to visit Nan. He tells her that although he and Peter were great friends, Peter failed to recognize him when they met on the road nearby. Nan turns from his advances until he becomes aroused and indicates that he is her father in his debt and that Peter also owes him a great sum of money. Nan becomes enraged and cries "It's a lie, a lie."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

SEFTON laughed sneeringly. "You're a plucky champion."

he said. "The more so as the man you are defending is nothing to you."

He watched her closely as he spoke, and it gave him a sort of satisfaction to see the color die from her face, to see the proud poise of her head falter.

"There are some people whom one defends instinctively from such a man as you," she retorted. "I wonder you are not ashamed to stand there and tell such abominable lies. Mr. Lyster is nothing to me any more."

Sefton laughed.

"Or is it that you are nothing to him?" he asked insolently.

Nan's eyes blazed.

"Oh, if I were a man I'd thrash you within an inch of your life!" she said passionately. "To dare to come here and offer me your friendship and then insult me like this!"

She walked past him to the door. Sefton watched her.

"What are you going to do?" he asked.

"I am going to fetch my father and ask him to turn you out of the house," she answered.

Sefton laughed.

"Do, by all means; but I'm afraid he won't oblige you."

There was a note of certainty in his voice that arrested Nan's attention. She looked back at him.

Sefton was leaning over a chair back, tapping the heel of his boot with a riding-crop he carried.

"You will find your father would infinitely prefer that I remain," he said coolly.

Nan's blue eyes searched his face; she caught her breath.

"I suppose you will be telling me next that my father owes you money as well?" she asked scornfully.

"It would be no more than the truth," he answered.

He raised himself suddenly from his stooping position, and crossing the room to where she stood, stretched a hand above her head and shut the door.

"Look here, Miss Marray," he said more gently. "I'm not out to quarrel with you—I admire you more than any woman I've met in all my life, and—"

"Thank you," said Nan furiously. "Your admiration is an honor which I can do without."

He smiled.

"Very well, let it go at that. You don't like me for some reason, but I assure you that I can be a very good friend to you and your family, if you will allow me. My business, I suppose, you despise—most women do, I believe—but I'm what you might call an unfortunate necessity. If your father was not borrowing money from me he would be borrowing it from somebody else, and I'm not quarreling with him for that."

Nan looked up then—her eyes were fierce.

"At a hundred per cent?" he asked, cuttingly.

"That is beside the point," he answered. "One has to pay for assistance nowadays. . . . But with regard to Lyster . . ."

She sprang to her feet.

"I refuse to discuss him with you—I refuse to allow his name to be mentioned. You pretended to be a friend of his—"

He raised his brows.

"If Lyster has played the game he must have told you what I was," he said. "Lyster is a very average man, though I don't expect I can convince you that he is. Before you knew him he went the pace very much as the average man with no ties to steady him does go the pace. I'm not quarreling with him for that."

Nan looked up then—her eyes were fierce.

"At a hundred per cent?" he asked, cuttingly.

"That is beside the point," he answered. "One has to pay for assistance nowadays. . . . But with regard to Lyster . . ."

She sprang to her feet.

"I refuse to discuss him with you—I refuse to allow his name to be mentioned. You pretended to be a friend of his—"

"Am I to let him go? It rests with you."

Nan looked up then—her eyes were fierce.

"At a hundred per cent?" he asked, cuttingly.

"I refuse to discuss him with you—I refuse to allow his name to be mentioned. You pretended to be a friend of his—"

—but he owes me money—more money than he can repay at present, anyway. And the question is—am I to ask him for it—or not?"

Nan did not understand what he meant.

Sefton went on:

"Lyster is suffering from loss of memory—so he says. . . ."

"He is. How dare you suggest anything else?"

"Very well, then, he is. But with the other case, of which I told you, in my mind I am naturally rather suspicious. I met Lyster yesterday down the road, and he did not know me." He shrugged his shoulders.

"Well—he owes me money. . . . If he has lost his memory, he has probably forgotten that he owes me money. This is what I wished to ask your advice about—am I to let him go? It rests with you."

He had moved closer to her again now; his head was craned forward in a peculiarly eager fashion.

Nan fell back from him.

"I don't know what you mean," she said, breathlessly.

"I think you do. However, perhaps it is rather early days yet for me to explain, seeing that this is only the third time we have met."

He took up his hat and the riding-whip from the table.

"I wish you good day," he said.

The gate creaked protestingly as he shut it, and then all was silence.

Nan stood where he had left her, her hands grasping the chair-back. She felt as if the afternoon had been a bad dream.

No wonder the boys had not liked Sefton; no wonder her own instinct had warned her against him.

And her father and Peter both owed him money!

"I don't believe it," she said aloud. "A man like that would say anything. I don't believe it!"

She began mechanically to clear away the tea-things. She carried them out to the little maid, who was straining her eyes by the twilight to read a novel; then she opened the side door and went out into the garden.

It was not dark yet. A breath of cool air stirred the trees and fanned Nan's hot face.

The words Sefton had spoken to her burned her heart. No man had ever dared speak so to her before.

"And I've never been afraid of anyone in all my life," she told herself, trembling. "What has happened to me?"

She had even been afraid to go to her father and tell him what had occurred; why was this? Deep down in her heart she knew; knew that though she had called Sefton a liar and refused to believe what he had said, something had told her that he had spoken the truth.

Nan had never been on affectionate terms with her father.

She knew that, no matter how deeply involved he might be, he would never make a confidante of her.

And now the menacing figure of Harley Sefton had stepped in.

What had he meant when he said that it rested with her whether or no he asked Peter to repay the money he had borrowed?

Nan had not the faintest idea—she walked up and down in the dusky garden racking her brains for a solution.

What had he meant by hinting that Peter was shamming?—she remembered her own doubts, and fear stabbed her heart.

She reached the gate, and for a moment leaned over it, looking down the road to the village beyond, where a few lights twinkled faintly through the darkness.

Peter! What was he doing now? Jealousy of Arnett's sister rose again in her mind; Arnett had said that she was one of the best—supposing Peter got to like her, and then to love her.

Unconsciously Nan fingered the ring which she wore at her neck; she had always felt that she got courage from touching it, but tonight it left her cold.

"You've got no pluck, my girl," she told herself fiercely. She clutched her hands on the cold iron spikes at the top of the gate till they hurt her soft flesh.

"Nan. . . . One of the boys called from the house behind her."

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service

In early times, before the causes of epidemic diseases were known, the ancient peoples ascribed epidemics to the work of the demons or evil spirits.

Some looked upon them as just punishment meted out to a sinful world for sins committed, and many of these beliefs in the supernatural origin of disease have come down from the early days to our own times.

It is not surprising that the ancient and medieval peoples were terrified by epidemic diseases, because practically nothing was known of their cause, or of the means by which they were spread.

Today a well-informed person knows that if he desires to prevent smallpox, either because of the fear of death, or the fear of disfigurement, he needs only to be vaccinated. If he is recently successfully vaccinated, he can be absolutely certain that he is protected against smallpox.

Bubonic plague is a disease of rats, and transferred to man by fleas which, leaving the rat after it dies from the plague, will bite man or the first warm-blooded animal that they encounter.

We have had plague on our Pacific and Gulf coasts.

Even if plague should appear in our Atlantic seaports we now know that if we keep away from rats and fleas we will not contract plague. If there were no rats or other plague-bearing rodents, such as ground squirrels, there probably would be no plague.

Yellow Fever

Quarantined

Yellow fever at one time created panic in our southern states and paralyzed industry and commerce until the first frost put an end to the fever.

So great was the panic that many little communities established a shot-gun quarantine against the rest of the world.

We now know that one special kind of mosquito spreads yellow fever, and that we cannot become infected with yellow fever except through the bite of a mosquito. No mosquitoes, no yellow fever.

We frequently see scareheads notices of the danger of typhus fever.

In the slums of our large cities we occasionally have a case of typhus today. It sometimes happens that a case of typhus fever is picked up at quarantine, or among the immigrants at Ellis Island.

Such an occasional case should cause no particular concern—certainly it should not cause a panic. Typhus fever is carried from one person to another by the body louse. People who are cleanly, and do not harbor these parasites, have nothing to fear from typhus fever.

Disease Carriers

May Be Healthy.

Asiatic cholera is contracted exactly as typhoid fever, swallowing water, milk, or food contaminated with the waste of some person suffering with the disease.

If your local health department with your support, compels the city to furnish pure water and pasteurized milk, you need only fear the carrier who may infect your food.

The carrier of typhoid or Asiatic cholera may be an apparently healthy individual without symptoms of these diseases. This is particularly true of typhoid.

The transfer of germs is made by soiled fingers of the carrier reaching our food, particularly milk, occasionally raw food, such as lettuce, which, by the way, is an excellent food rich in a certain kind of vitamin.

No carriers should handle food, and no person should handle food, unless the hands have been thoroughly cleansed.

There is another measure of protection against typhoid, namely vaccination. Today we can be vaccinated against typhoid fever and this is a wise precaution, especially when traveling.

SICK WOMEN SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED

Letters Like This Prove the Reliability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Turtle Lake, Wisconsin. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness, backache and nervousness. I had these troubles for years and had taken other medicines for them, but I have found no good as the Vegetable Compound and I recommend it to my friends who have troubles similar to mine. I saw it advertised and thought I would try it and it has helped me in all my troubles. I have had six children and I have taken the Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound before each one was born, for weakness, vomiting, poor appetite and backache, and again after childbirth because of dizzy headaches. It is a good medicine for it always helps me. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for the last eight years for constipation." — Mrs. MABEL A. POINT, R. F. D. More energy will increase your earning ability

It is the red blooded people who win success in this world! Red blood gives men and women the vitality—the energy—the strength and the activity to earn what they deserve!

Nobody can do justice to themselves when they are suffering from want of rich, red blood. It is this impoverished condition of the blood that causes so many failures in life. There's no place at the top for the weakling—the men and women with poor, weak blood.

Build up your blood! Get in the red-blooded class—and get the rewards you deserve. S. S. S. will do it for you! S. S. S. helps Nature build millions of red-blood-cells! S. S. S. sends rich, red blood tingling to every fibre of your body and every pore of your skin. You are fairly radiant with energy, vim and vitality.

You'll look like success, too! The rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build for you will clear your skin of any ugly blemishes—your eyes will sparkle with enthusiasm—firm, solid flesh will round out your figure—strength and power will come to weak, flabby muscles.

THE TANGLE

I wondered, Little Marquise, if I imagined that Sally turned pale. As she put down the receiver and called to me.

"It's Mr. Prescott, Leslie, and he wants to talk to you."

I hastened to the telephone, putting the receiver to my ear, and heard in a voice that I did not recognize, "Leslie, is that you?"

"Yes, who is it?"

"Why don't you know my voice? It's Jack, Leslie."

"What is the matter, John?"

"Even when Sally told me that you wanted me at the phone I did not recognize your voice. I thought you were having someone else talk for you."

"Well, I have had enough during the last two or three hours to change not only my voice but my face as well. I think I have grown ten years older. I—"

"Where are you now?" I interrupted.

"At home. Oh, Leslie, why did you not come home to dinner. If you had, this would not have happened."

"What would not have happened, Jack?"

ABE MARTIN

PROF. TANSEY, R. F. O'BRIEN, OUT ON BAIL FOR TEACHING EVOLUTION, WILL SPEAK AT CHAUTAUQUA TONIGHT HEAR HIM!!

You'd never know some folks had been on a vacation if they didn't come back. Th' saxophone is th' only musical instrument in th' world that sounds worse after you've learned to play it than it does while you're practicing on it.

Jack? For heavens' sake speak coherently. What are you talking about? What's the matter?"

"Oh, my dear, my dear, I except you will find yourself involved in another disagreeable scandal when you read the newspapers this morning."

"I don't understand, John. Who could involve me in a scandal? I have been with Sally all evening, right here in this building."

"Oh, I know it. I know it. It is the worst part of it all. You are not to blame at all. Personally, I don't think I am to blame either, but that doesn't make the notoriety any easier to bear. However, my chief regret is for the grief and just anger that you will feel over my foolishness."

"But you do know, Leslie, that I do love you and that I do need you more than any person in all the world."

"Come right home, dear. I'd come down after you but there are three or four reporters and a photographer or two out in front, and I don't want to have to pose for either of them."

"Please bring Sally Atherton with you. I need all the support I can get. Fortunately, Sydney Carton is here. He came in unexpectedly a little while ago and went my bail."

"Went on your bail bond? What do you mean, Jack? Have you been arrested?"

"Yes, but I can't tell it to you over the phone. I am sending a taxi for you so that it will look as though you were visitors coming to the house."

Little Marquise, I was overcome with worry. I explained as quickly as I could to Sally and before I got through the taxi was out in front.

When Sally and I arrived at the house, three or four reporters were still on the sidewalk.

"You rush in," said Sally, "and I'd try and tackle and keep them here long enough for you to get inside the door."

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Alleging that his confession was made under the influence of threats and promises, Raymond Costello, convicted Chicago murderer, under sentence to hang Oct. 15, carried an appeal to the supreme court today. He was found guilty in the Cook county criminal court of strangling Madeline White, 16, of 6945 South LaSalle, St., the night of July 9, 1925.

Attorneys for Costello recited that police dragged him out of bed and suspected him of several third degree methods, one of them ordering that he be taken into the basement so more stringent punishment might be inflicted.

The body of the White girl was found stuffed under a porch by Frank Giddis, milk man, who saw the feet protruding. Today's appeal asks the court for a writ of error and superseas.

Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Col. Mitchell of the army air service reported today to the inspector general's office of the war department where disciplinary proceedings against him are under consideration.

The case at this stage is in the hands of Col. G. A. Nugent, of the inspector general's office and before any charges are made, Col. Mitchell will be given an opportunity to make any reply he desires in advance. Col. Nugent's recommendation as to further proceedings will be made after he has considered what Col. Mitchell has to say.

Any court martial would set in Washington and indications are that Maj. General Summerall, commanding the second corps area, New York, would be senior officer and president of the court.

Welcome Home MacMillan Arctic Expedition

Commander Donald B. MacMillan

Commander E. F. McDonald, Jr. Second in Command

Zenith Week

October 4th to October 9th

Our Greetings to Commander MacMillan and Commander McDonald—home from the Arctic.

The story of the MacMillan Arctic Expedition—"the greatest expedition of modern times"—is also the story of another triumph for Zenith radio.

"Zenith" was MacMillan's exclusive choice because he had found by actual experience that it gave sure, dependable results.

Zenith radio in the Arctic established new records for long-distance communication—penetrated the heretofore impenetrable Auroral Band.

On this, his latest voyage to the Frozen North, Zenith radio enabled him to keep in instant touch with America, Europe, New Zealand—to all parts of the world—and to send back word of his discoveries to the civilized world.

What was good enough for MacMillan—the radio he relied upon and never found wanting—is good enough for you.

At the time we welcome home the MacMillan Expedition we welcome also the opportunity to demonstrate Zenith—"the best there is in radio"—in your home—at your convenience. Call or telephone—today.

Wed., Thurs., "AS NO MAN HAS LOVED" based on the story "The Man Without a Country." This picture is named as one of the best six photoplays released during the month of September. It is a tale of a loyal young American, Lieut. Nolan who paid with a life of heartbreak for unmeaning words uttered in the heat of passion. The picture is sincere, human, and rich in incident. It gets you where you live from start to finish.
